Current & Potential Level

Messias (full name: Messias Rodrigues da Silva Junior) is a 22-year-old right footed central defender who currently plays for América MG in his home country, Brazil. América-MG is currently active in the Serie B, but well on its way to the highest Brazilian League.

Messias became a key factor in the success of América MG, playing a major role as a central defender. Being 1m92 tall and having solid jumping and heading abilities, Messias cannot be beaten easily in aerial duels. The Brazilian player has decent passing skills, both on short and long distances. He chooses his position in the game well and makes the right decisions very often. His tackling is surely one of his best qualities. Finally, it is also very hard to pass him due to his strength.

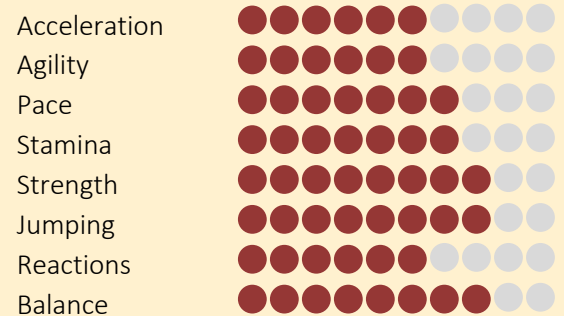

I believe Messias is ready for a move to a bigger club next season. He will surely not be playing in the Brazilian Serie B again next year. The Brazilian has the right qualities to become a solid defender in any interesting European League. With his qualities, he would be a good signing for an ambitious team in Belgium or a smaller team in the German Bundesliga.
